

New Tab Clarissa

Bookmarks

commute @ A project about the nature of departure and arrival and the projection of presence in transition.

I saw living in a dorm as a more temporary space. So, I have fully settled in the place I am in now, buying furniture to solidify the notion. But really, why is there a difference in my mind between the two? To be perfectly honest, I really don't know how to start talking about the bus stop. To be specific, it is the bus stop on Ave C ~~E~~ 18th St near the JFK highway. I rarely do take the bus, just because I feel that the train / walking to school is always 'faster.' However, whenever I do pass by the stop either when running errands, or during my commute, I am always surprised to commute @ A project about the nature of departure and arrival and the projection of presence in transition.

New Tab Clarissa

Bookmarks

I saw living in a dorm as a more temporary space. So, I have fully settled in the place I am in now, buying furniture to solidify the notion. But really, why is there a difference in my mind between the two?

To be perfectly honest, I really don't know how to start talking about the bus stop. To be specific, it is the bus stop on Ave C & E18th St near the JFK highway. I rarely do take the bus, just because I feel that the train / walking to school is always 'faster.' However, whenever I do pass by the stop either when running errands, or during my commute, I am always surprised to commute @ A project about the nature of departure and arrival and the projection of presence in transition.

New Tab Clarissa

Bookmarks

I saw living in a dorm as a more temporary space. So, I have fully settled in the place I am in now, buying furniture to solidify the notion. But really, why is there a difference in my mind between the two?

To be perfectly honest, I really don't know how to start talking about the bus stop. To be specific, it is the bus stop on Ave C & E18th St near the JFK highway. I rarely do take the bus, just because I feel that the train / walking to school is always 'faster.' However, whenever I do pass by the stop either when running errands, or during my commute, I am always surprised to

